Dear Mr. Donley:

Welcome to the Washington Area Operations Center Chiefs' Conference. This is the first conference of this type in some years; your presence and that of your colleagues are testimony to the need for such gatherings.

Purposes for the conference are several: to examine new concepts in warning and current operations from a substantive standpoint; to discuss new technologies for assisting us in performing both our common and our unique missions; to review current operating procedures and proposed revisions; and, of course, to get to know each other better and to establish even more effective lines of communication among and between us.

The conference will be [redacted] You are scheduled to be billeted at Quarters 3, Room 4. We will provide you an agenda upon arrival [redacted] The next two pages contain information about your conference colleagues.

I ask you to pay particular attention to the final page. We need your feedback before planning any follow-on conferences. Your comments on this conference and ideas for future gatherings are essential. Equally important, we need to ensure information about you is correct so that we can continue to correspond with you. There will be time at the end of the conference to complete the information requested. Please take a few moments for thoughtful review.

We in the Office of the National Intelligence Officer for Warning will do everything possible to make this conference a productive one for you. Two members of my staff, [redacted] are here for just that purpose. Please seek them out if you have questions, comments, or concerns.

Let's enjoy, contribute, listen, and learn from each other!

Sincerely,

Charles E. Allen
